Quick correction: unsearchable not unreachable. Bad apple, autocorrect.

Dear all,

I just realised the unfaithful whore most likely did not blaspheme against the Holy Spirit because, in the purely hypothetical and impossible event that I am the unspeakable thing, I had already forgiven them. John is probably okay unless he goes by a different name two thousand years ago. But then, I realised I did not know who John was, and he said some truly weird things. I found my Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ's words are sarcastically and quite literally true to the letter.

Your strict adherence to the law your religious figurehead supposedly died for is the reason why people tell me they prefer not to talk about religion when I bring up my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. I am not religious. I do not subscribe to Christianity the religion. I am a Christ bro. I do not believe you know my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ if you put the law above the love of the Lord and the love of one another, in which case you are failing to understand the depths of His love, mercy and grace are unreachable. The religious God you subscribe to is dead and pronounced dead by a German dude Nietzsche.

The God I have faith in is very much alive and lives in every true believer's heart, regardless of what the Antichrists pretending to be Christians, scribes and Pharisees think and judge. Evil roams free on the face of the earth because people believe we are all going to die anyway and we do whatever the fuck we want and there is no reason to care about one another because there is no profit.

Btw, I do not blame you for not replying to any of my 60+ emails. I would not know what to say if I were you and did not live a weird life like mine or have an obsessive-compulsive need to seek the truth and diligently give everyone the benefit of the doubt, including an infamous Austrian artist. I believe that is forgiveness checked on my to-do list.

I am not a wicked servant. Are you? What are your thoughts on rampant homosexuals? Would you like to stone me to death?

Two thousand years later, the world knows not love nor God, but only empty words.

Kind regards,
A burning love that wished death because that would have been mercy.

Dear all,

It is without pleasure that I bring the following hypothesis regarding Matthew 25:31-46. When I was caravanning at Rosebay Naturist Camping less than a year ago before John twisted every single word I said and shoved them back down my throat and gave me a depersonalization episode for the first time in my life, we had a conversation on the issue of suicide due to my often understandably misunderstood humour and sarcasm in my choice of language, in which John said he would never kill himself.

After getting kicked out of Rosebay Naturist Camping and before I read a certain bestseller, I expressed a rather concerning sentiment to Fraser, but I was able to clarify the issue by the end of the therapy session. I told him that I had always thought it would be pretty cool if there were something that I was willing to die for. After getting kicked out of Rosebay, I felt like there was something that I believed I would be willing to die for, but I was uncertain what it was at the time of the session. But when Fraser asked what that could be out of understandable concerns and compassion for a fellow human being, I said I did not know, but it would have to be something true like a universal constant such as the gravitational constant. I did not express my doubts about our belief in the universal nature of the gravitational constant due to my epistemological stance and the limitations of our understanding of causality, mainly because we ran out of time again for the session, and partly because I did not study David Hume's work carefully. I am a Wikipedia philosopher at best.

Shortly before writing this email and whilst I was brushing my teeth, I realised I was overthinking again in my previous hypothesis on Matthew 25:31-46 as detailed in one of my 60 emails sent over 31 weeks. The only question that needs to be asked and can only be answered by the heart is what would you be willing to die for. You are a sheep if the answer is anyone other than yourself. You are a goat if your answer is anything else. And you are the worst of all if there is nothing you would be willing to die for because you are essentially saying you are above all things and you are god.

Throughout this 31-week journey, I struggled time and time again with forgiveness. I swung violently from wishing that day to come in the next hour to the world still has enough love, faith and hope for me to keep going and wishing that day never comes every other day. I was no longer certain whether I forgave John and Meiling or whether it was self-deception. I did the only thing I could and prayed for Him to help me forgive them. And He answered my prayers last night, again.

He made me realise that I had already forgiven them when I said I motherfucking hope I am not the motherfucking unspeakable c-word and m-word because, above all else, it was for their benefit rather than mine. Matthew 26 is a good read and I sincerely hope an unfaithful whore did not blaspheme the Holy Spirit when they threw scripture in my face and said I did not know God's love after I walked off a cliff in mainland China.

As always, there is no need to worry about me. It would be wise to start trembling and start confessing.
